of "The Biggist Swindler Living," Truth identified a man named Wella, a fraudulent patent monger in London, with the Wells who recently gained considerable notoriety through his al-

Truth says: Undeterred by previous exposures, Wells' latest coups have been on a larger scale than before. Within a few months, under the pretense that he was about to float patents that would yield enormous wealth to investors. Wells has victimized one lady out of £18,000, another lady out of £5,000, and a gentleman out of £10,000, in the meantime sucking dry a number of smaller flies, ranging from workmen with a few years' savings to invest, to aristocrats commanding thousands of pounds. All sections of society have been victimized. Wells might have long since retired with an enormous fortune, but he is an inveterate gambler.
